THE New York Herald was founded by James Gordon Bennett in 1855. It remained the sole property of its founder until his death, in 1872, when his son, also James Gordon Bennett, succeeded to the ownership of the paper, which remained in his hands until his death, in 1918. The Herald became the property of Frank A. Munsey, its present owner, in 1920.

Taken by and large, it was assumed that the transportation companies would re- pany, which gave some excellent per ceive adequate compensation from the formances at the old Academy of Music public for the service they undertook to Then Parepa passed away, regretted in accordance with the terms of the contract as agreed to, the companies bor-rowed hundreds of millions of dollars at a high cost. All of this money was spent under the direction of the Public Service Commission, and the city re-ceived the benefit. While the city assumed no legal responsibility toward the holders of these securities, it is a question if there is not a moral obliga-tion involved which the present city administration has utterly refused

The writer holds no brief for the transportation companies and has not one dollar's worth of interest in any of their securities. All he wants to see is good and adequate service, a service that will be a credit to the city and a square deal for all concerned.

To THE NEW YORK HERALD: In the ion of the raising and pr discussion of the raising and preserva-tion of game a few simple but funda mental rules of successful practice seen to have been lost sight of.

The quail is one of the easiest birds i the world to propagate. It has to be fed in the hard times of a bad winter the vermin, foxes, hawks, crows, and worst of all, the domestic cats which where there is little grain, strips should mer, and the big bevies should be shot bevies are left, when the breeding seadrive away the young cocks, and so perpetuate old and eventually non-produc-tive birds; but after the trimming down the next season will see two or three bevies for every one so treated.

Sportsmen will always follow this rule in the flock if they can. This is a vital reason why the shooting over the land of Tom. Dick and Harry should be stopped selves are to blame. Even as the law local magistrate every person trespass-ing on their land and have him pun-
